

AOL Foundation IEI Blue Ribbon Panel

Ginny Wydler
Director, Standards & Policy
America Online, Inc.

As Director, Standards & Policy, Ginny is responsible for a broad variety of policy considerations aimed at ensuring consumers have a safe, enjoyable experience with AOL's products and services. Her role encompasses child safety and privacy protections (including AOL's Parental Controls), advertising and content standards & practices.

Ginny joined AOL in 1994 in business development, growing and developing AOL's children's programming, launching the Teens and Families channels and helping to evolve AOL's Parental Controls. She was AOL's spokesperson for the Internet Driver's Ed program, a national traveling Internet education and safety class for children and parents, and was selected to serve on the Blue Ribbon Panel for AOL Foundation's Interactive Education Initiative for the three years since its inception.

Prior to joining AOL, Ginny worked in several positions at The Walt Disney Company, including film marketing and consumer products licensing. Ginny received her MBA from the J.L. Kellogg School. She has been active with children's educational programs for many years - participating in Chicago Cities in Schools program and tutoring at elementary schools. She and her husband are now busy with their own young son.